1. About a thousand women, representing all women's activities, attended daily sessions of a five-day conference to lay the groundwork for a Shanghai organization of the All-China Women's Federation.
2. Emphasis was placed on industrial workers, and factory workers were brought by special bus each day. These women were particularly encouraged to speak freely of their experiences prior to the Communist occupation of Shanghai and to tell of their plans for the future.
3. Nearly all speakers were eloquent and obviously moved by the attention they were getting. As the meetings progressed enthusiasm mounted until it reached the fervor of a revival.
